

Writing an information leaflet/poster

The following points are designed to help you design your information text about Northern Ireland. Read them carefully and bear all the points in mind.

- Think carefully about how you can make your leaflet/poster interesting and eye-catching;
- Consider your headline carefully and think about putting captions and pictures in your text to make it more interesting;
- Keep your information simple. You are not being asked to write the definitive history of Northern Ireland so aim for a simple and clear outline of events;
- Make the details relevant to pupils studying Across the Barricades. You could draw a table and write in the Catholic and Protestant characters and give quotations that show their opinions of Kevin and Sadie's friendship;
- You could include descriptions from the book that highlight the every day existence of people living in Belfast (soldiers patrolling, boarded up shops, houses being searched etc);
- You might like to draw a timeline with major events in Ireland's history this century;
- Your poster must be finished this lesson so you do not have time to write in great detail. Use your Developing Comprehension Skills to help you.

Writing an information leaflet/poster

The following points are designed to help you design your information text about Northern Ireland. Read them carefully and bear all the points in mind.

- Think carefully about how you can make your leaflet/poster interesting and eye-catching;
- Consider your headline carefully and think about putting captions and pictures in your text to make it more interesting;
- Keep your information simple. You are not being asked to write the definitive history of Northern Ireland so aim for a simple and clear outline of events;
- Make the details relevant to pupils studying Across the Barricades. You could draw a table and write in the Catholic and Protestant characters and give quotations that show their opinions of Kevin and Sadie's friendship;
- You could include descriptions from the book that highlight the every day existence of people living in Belfast (soldiers patrolling, boarded up shops, houses being searched etc);
- You might like to draw a timeline with major events in Ireland's history this century;
- Your poster must be finished this lesson so you do not have time to write in great detail. Use your Developing Comprehension Skills to help you.